dict a record year for the American manufacturer," said H. B. Leary, jr.,

"The consensus of opinion among the salesmen was that the bad effects of the European war on American business in general have worn off and now that American industry has found its feet again things are going to move fast.

"Many representatives from the Southern States were present at the Maxwell meeting and without exception they reported business to be better than in many months. The "buy a bale" movement has given the Southern farmer courage and assurance and if the movement continues it will give Southern business a much brighter aspect.
